Our commitment to the environment

Macfarlane Labels recognises its responsibilities to the environment and we make strenuous efforts to ensure that we make a positive environmental impact wherever we can.

We do so by manufacturing our labels from recyclable materials and, wherever possible they can be recycled alongside the products to which they are attached.

We also encourage our customers to minimise the size of labels that they employ in order to reduce waste.

Furthermore, our resealable labels system, Reseal-it®, allows food packs to be opened and closed up to 25 times, reducing food waste by keeping products fresher for longer.

Quality

The Macfarlane Labels' Quality Programme is based on 4 key features:

- We only use the highest quality raw materials including self adhesive films, paper and inks.
- We only use the most modern and technically advanced Nilpeter printing presses.
- We employ experienced and conscientious people in all areas of our business and the average length of service is 13 years.
- We have a minimum of 15 quality inspection processes during the production process.

Our accreditations:

- Quality Management Systems (ISO9001 :2008)
- British Retail Consortium (BRCIOP)

In-line

A Reseal-it® machine applying Reseal-it® labels to your film directly on to your packaging line.

Our units can be either retro-fitted on existing production lines or integrated on new machine installations by us or by our partners.

Pre applied labelled film can be offered from a number of sites with national and international delivery capabilities:

- Macfarlane Labels, Kilmarnock, UK
- Printpack, Bury, UK
